

LIVING HERITAGE: REMEDiating THROUGH VIDEOPOETRY

Archived in the Blue Point Art Archive

Curatorial Dossier prepared by: Dr Justyna Gorzkowicz

Introduction

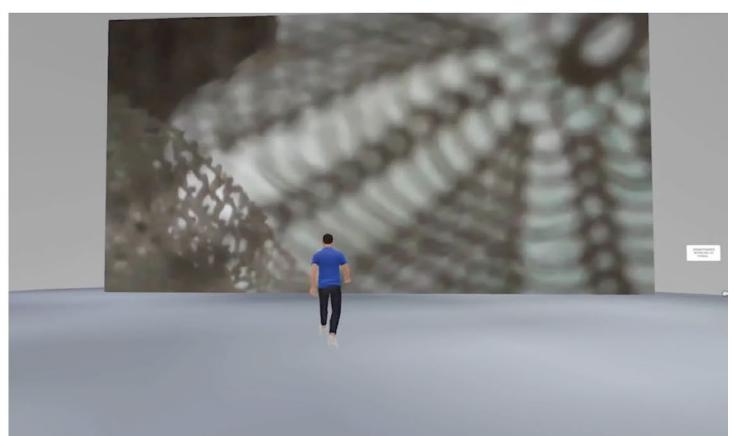

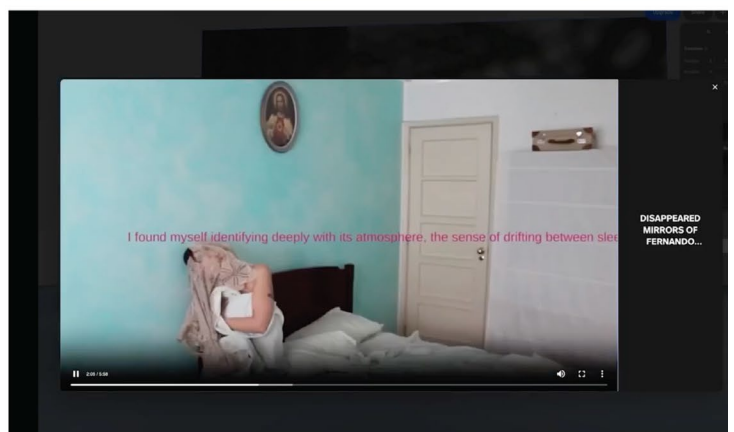

This dossier records the exhibition, its workshop-based development within the project Communities and Artistic Participation in Hybrid Environments (CAPHE), and its afterlife in the Blue Point Art Archive. It presents the exhibition framework, the educational and artistic context, and essential information on the videopoems, their literary sources, and the collaborative processes behind the project.

Conceived as both an exhibition and a pedagogical outcome, the initiative combined artistic practice, multilingual education, and the remediation of literary heritage. As such, the dossier functions both as a record of the exhibition and as a guide to the broader context in which it emerged.

From exhibition to archive

Living Heritage: Remediating through Videopoetry presents three videopoems based on works by Stanisław Młodożeniec, Stanisław Vincenz, and Fernando Pessoa with his heteronyms. Each of them reworks a literary text through image, voice, sound and rhythm, treating poetry not as a fixed object on the page, but as a form that can be re-entered, re-experienced and read again through audiovisual means. The exhibition was conceived across more than one viewing environment. Presented both as an on-site installation at the Gallery of the Faculty of Fine Arts of the University of Lisbon and as a virtual environment in Spatial, it explored how the same videopoetic work changes when received in different spatial and technical conditions. In the metaverse, the works could be encountered as part of an expanded curatorial landscape, shaped by navigation, distance and immersion. In the physical exhibition, their presence within the gallery invited a more situated and embodied relation to screen, sound and scale.

This contrast was further sharpened by the use of different display forms, including the presentation of one videopoem on a vintage monitor with headphones. Such a choice was not merely stylistic. It framed the act of viewing as more intimate, concentrated and materially specific, reminding the viewer that videopoetry is not only a digital form, but also a form experienced through media apparatuses with their own histories, textures and constraints. The shift between contemporary virtual display and older screen technology opened different modes of attention and suggested that remediation is never neutral: it always depends on the medium through which a work is encountered. Rather than illustrating literary texts, the videopoems reinterpret them through translation, montage, movement and visual composition. In this way, the exhibition proposes videopoetry as a medium through which literary heritage may be revisited and classical works opened to new audiences without losing their complexity. What is offered here is not a simplified version of literature, but another path into it: one shaped by listening, looking, temporal flow and layered sensory response.

Installation views of Disappeared Mirrors of Fernando Pessoa in its physical and virtual exhibition settings, including the vintage monitor display and selected stills from the videopoem.

The curatorial logic of the exhibition also rests on plurality. The three works emerge from different authorial models – individual, collaborative and workshop-based – and therefore demonstrate that videopoetry is not a single stable formula, but a field of relations between text and image, voice and editing, authorship and reinterpretation. Across all three pieces, poetry appears as something that can continue to live beyond the printed page, not only through reading, but through renewed performance in physical, virtual and archival space. Within the Blue Point Art Archive, the exhibition no longer functions merely as documentation of a past event, but as its renewed virtual setting. Reconfigured in a purpose-built interior designed for its archival presentation, it continues to serve as a space of access, dissemination, interpretation, artistic and pedagogical use, extending the public life of the project beyond its original moment and venue.

Literary source and original author

Stanisław Młodożeniec (1895–1959) was one of the key figures of Polish Futurism. His poetry combined linguistic experiment, rhythmic force and a fascination with movement, modernity and the shifting texture of lived experience. Moving between avant-garde energy and existential reflection, his work often transformed ordinary reality into a dynamic field of visual, sonic and semantic tension. In the context of this exhibition, Młodożeniec appears not only as a literary innovator, but also as an author whose poetry lends itself to contemporary audiovisual transformation.

Excerpt from the source text

Stanisław Młodożeniec, W drodze / On the Road (manuscript version, English translation by Justyna Gorzkowicz): I board, a lost passenger / and do not wish to know where the ship is headed; / on the shore remained a bundle of dreams and hopes / and a flower – / and the ashen shadow beneath the flower. // No chosen land awaits the journey, / for the earth is one; everywhere, the same earth, / and joy awaits me nowhere – / nor sorrow. / Time has gone blind, and mute. // My head is light as a balloon; / a usurer took the earrings of my questions in pledge. / Waves push against me – I yield to the waves. / Oh light, so light – / time has turned weightless for me.

About the videopoem

Jedna ziemia / One Earth reimagines Młodożeniec's poem W drodze in audiovisual form, drawing on the rhythm, velocity, and experimental charge of early twentieth-century Futurism while opening the work to contemporary ecological and humanist resonances. Rather than illustrating the source text, the videopoem enters into a dialogue with its poetic vision, translating verbal movement into relations between sound, image, editing, and spatial composition. It is also shaped by the coexistence of two authorial versions of the poem, whose differences in rhythm, punctuation, and existential tonality open the work to a layered process of reinterpretation. In this way, the videopoem unfolds not as a linear adaptation, but as an intermedial composition in which textual, sonic, and visual structures remain distinct while generating meaning through tension, rhythm, and resonance. The work is shaped by multilayered authorship. Justyna Gorzkowicz develops the textual and interpretive framework, attending to the existential and versological dimensions of the poem in screen-based form. Marcin Jerzyna creates the sonic landscape, treating sound not as accompaniment but as an autonomous layer of meaning and affect, while drawing out the dreamlike suspension, melancholy, and reflective inwardness of the poem's later variant. Jarosław Solecki constructs the visual field through image and montage, balancing dispersal and coherence within the work's overall structure. His visual approach draws on the square-based logic of Młodożeniec's Kwadraty, extending it through references to Kazimir Malevich's Suprematism and to Stanisław Dróżdż's concept-shapes. Together, these elements produce a videopoem in which the source text is remediated through a new intermedial configuration, generating meanings that arise precisely from its translation into audiovisual form.

ECHOES OF A FATHER

Literary source: Stanisław Vincenz, Parafraza Modlitwy Pańskiej / Paraphrase of the Lord's Prayer

Videopoem by: Justyna Gorzkowicz and Jarosław Solecki

English translation of the source text: Anna Zaranko

Place of production and year: London, 2025 (Polish version: Baughbrooke–London, 2023)

Language: English

Duration: 04:47 min

Literary source and original author

Stanisław Vincenz (1888–1971) was a writer, essayist, and philosopher shaped by the oral traditions of the Eastern Carpathians and by a vision of culture rooted in dialogue, ethical encounter, and shared memory. His work combines literary imagination, philosophical reflection, and close attention to multilingual and multicultural heritage. In the context of this exhibition, Vincenz represents a mode of literary thinking in which voice, spirituality, and cultural transmission remain closely intertwined. He regarded Homer as the “father of all forms” and saw Dante Alighieri as one of his greatest continuators, a perspective that helps situate his own writing within a long tradition linking epic, spiritual imagination, and the shaping power of language. The literary source for the videopoem is Vincenz’s Polish-language text Parafraza Modlitwy Pańskiej [Paraphrase of the Lord’s Prayer]. The work approaches prayer not as a fixed devotional formula, but as a reflective and rhythmically shaped act of address. Read in relation to Vincenz’s broader oeuvre, it resonates with his enduring concern for oral tradition, spiritual experience, and the ethical dimension of language.

About the videopoem

Echoes of a Father remediates and reinterprets Stanisław Vincenz's Parafraza Modlitwy Pańskiej [Paraphrase of the Lord's Prayer], presenting it in English through a form shaped by image, voice, and sound. The work explores how sacred and literary language may resonate across cultural and linguistic contexts, and how videopoetry can serve as a medium for reflection, translation, and reinterpretation. The English version functions here as a renewed space of poetic articulation. The English translation by Anna Zaranko was developed for the version used in the videopoem, responding not only to the source text itself but also to its stanzaic arrangement and interpretive reshaping. The videopoem creates a layered encounter between source text, translated language, and audiovisual composition, allowing Vincenz's meditation to unfold through a different linguistic and sensory register. In this way, the piece extends the exhibition's broader concern with literary heritage as something that can be remediated, revoiced, and re-experienced.

Literary source and original author

Fernando Pessoa (1888–1935) was one of the central voices of Portuguese modernism and is renowned for creating heteronyms: distinct literary personae with their own styles, biographies, and intellectual positions. Through them, he explored multiplicity, fractured subjectivity, and shifting forms of authorship. In the context of this exhibition, Pessoa is significant not only as a major modernist writer, but also as an author whose work already stages voice, identity, and textual instability as dynamic and performative structures. This makes his writing particularly resonant for videopoetic reinterpretation, where plurality, fragmentation, and layered expression become constitutive artistic principles.

About the videopoem

Developed in Lisbon within the CAPHE framework, Disappeared Mirrors (working title in early exhibition materials: Dispersed Mirrors) reworks Fernando Pessoa's polyphonic poetics through overlapping languages, voices, and visual forms. The piece reflects the multiplicity associated with the Portuguese modernist and his literary personae, while also foregrounding collective authorship and workshop-based experimentation as part of the artistic process. At the same time, the videopoem is structured as a shared composition made up of distinct individual contributions, each shaped by a personal encounter with Pessoa's writing. In this sense, the work functions both as a collaborative whole and as a sequence of singular responses to literature, gathered into one polyphonic form.

Its structure includes Ode Triunfal Redux by Tiago Mendonça, Na Floresta do Alheamento by Carlota Bonito, Estátuas Invisíveis by Margarida Leal, inspired by Cul de Lampe by Álvaro de Campos, and a video by Patrícia Dias based on Tabacaria by Álvaro de Campos. Additional textual layers include Mar Português and Autopsicografia. The work also incorporates Greek translation by Agnieszka Szajner, Italian translation by Giulia Lanciani, vocal contributions by Giuseppe Caprioti, Ellodie Cheikh, and Agnieszka Szajner, and editing by Justyna Gorzkowicz and Jarosław Solecki. Disappeared Mirrors occupies a particular place within the exhibition as the outcome of a workshop-based educational process. It emerged from individual research into Pessoa's writings, the selection and justification of chosen fragments, the development of visual responses, and the later assembly of textual, vocal, and performative layers into a shared multilingual composition. The videopoem was therefore shaped not only through collective making, but also through individual inquiry, visual experimentation, and personal acts of reading transformed into audiovisual form.

Educational and project context

The exhibition was developed within Communities and Artistic Participation in Hybrid Environments (CAPHE, Grant Agreement No. 101086391; UKRI Grant Ref: EP/X038572/1), a project focused on hybrid, multilingual, and practice-based approaches to cultural participation, artistic education, and media literacy. Within this framework, Living Heritage functioned not only as an exhibition, but also as an educational and research-oriented outcome shaped through workshops, curatorial experimentation, and public dissemination across physical and virtual environments.

Photographs from workshop sessions with students in Lisbon, led by Justyna Gorzkowicz and Jarosław Solecki as part of Living Heritage within the CAPHE project. Lisbon, 2025.

A key part of this process was the workshop cycle carried out in Lisbon with postgraduate students from the Faculty of Fine Arts of the University of Lisbon, including students intending to pursue doctoral research. Conducted between 31 October and 18 November 2025, with an overall workload of 40 hours, the workshops led to the collaborative videopoem Disappeared Mirrors. The cycle was conceived and led by Justyna Gorzkowicz and Jarosław Solecki. It included concept development, materials production, editing, and mentoring, and was preceded by the introductory session Introduction to Videopoetry and the Manifestos. The workshop model combined collective making with individual research. Students worked directly with Fernando Pessoa's writings, selecting fragments they found compelling, justifying their choices, and independently gathering visual material for their videopoetic responses. These separate layers were later assembled into a shared polyphonic composition. In this way, the workshop approached videopoetry not simply as a finished artwork, but as a method of reading, interpreting, and transforming literary texts across media. It also incorporated elements of art-based research, since creative practice functioned here as a mode of inquiry, experimentation, and critical engagement with the source material.

The educational environment surrounding Living Heritage was further shaped by the presence of Tom Konyves – poet, intermedia artist, pioneer of videopoetry, and author of Videopoetry: A Manifesto (2011). His role in the Lisbon programme was important not only as a point of reference, but also in shaping its artistic and pedagogical framework. The exhibition 10 or 15 Poets with a Video Camera, curated by Konyves, provided a broader conceptual horizon for the Lisbon events by presenting videopoetry as both an evolving art form and a critical inquiry into poetry in new media. Konyves's understanding of videopoetry as a hybrid medium – one in which word, image, and sound generate a specifically poetic experience – was central to the methodology of the workshops. His distinction between Kinetic Text, Sound Text, Visual Text, Performance, and Cin(e)poetry helped situate videopoetry not as a simple illustration of poetry, but as an autonomous audiovisual form. This framework informed both the exhibited works and the workshop process, in which poetic texts were treated not as fixed verbal objects, but as material open to remediation, reconfiguration, and new modes of reception.

Within the wider conference exhibition Media and Material Literacy in Extended Reality, presented across four sections and several sites, Living Heritage: Remediating through Videopoetry functioned as one element of a broader curatorial structure shown at Exhibition Site 1: FBAUL Gallery. In this context, it appeared alongside works by contemporary artists and installations developed through workshops, situating the project within a shared inquiry into how expanded environments reshape perception, learning and meaning-making. Its proximity to 10 or 15 Poets with a Video Camera further reinforced the videopoetic dimension of the Lisbon programme, while placing Living Heritage within a larger exhibition ecology concerned with materiality, hybridity and the educational potential of artistic practice.

This shared context was further developed in the 60-minute masterclass Hybrid Voices, Shared Languages: Videopoetry in Multilingual Education, led by Tom Konyves. The session examined videopoetry as both an artistic medium and an approach to multilingual education, with particular emphasis on media and material literacy. It explored how learners engage simultaneously with text, image, sound, and performance, and how multilingual voices can be layered, juxtaposed, and shared within hybrid and media-rich educational settings.

For the students involved in the workshop cycle, the masterclass offered an opportunity to deepen and extend their developing videopoetic practice. Because the workshops had already begun earlier, the session did not initiate the process, but expanded it. It functioned as a moment of methodological reflection and artistic development, allowing participants to relate their own work to a broader history and theory of videopoetry, and to consider its relevance for education, intermediality, and cultural participation. Taken together, the workshops, the masterclass, and the exhibition environment positioned videopoetry as both an artistic and pedagogical practice. They showed how literary heritage can be re-entered through audiovisual experimentation, how poetic texts may be opened to new readers and viewers through collaborative work, and how physical and virtual settings can support new forms of interpretive and creative participation. In this sense, Living Heritage functioned not only as an exhibition of completed works, but also as a platform for developing and disseminating videopoetry as a tool of hybrid artistic education.

MEDIA AND MATERIAL LITERACY IN EXTENDED REALITY

Exhibition Site 1 - FBAUL Gallery

Curatorship: FBAUL Organizing Committee

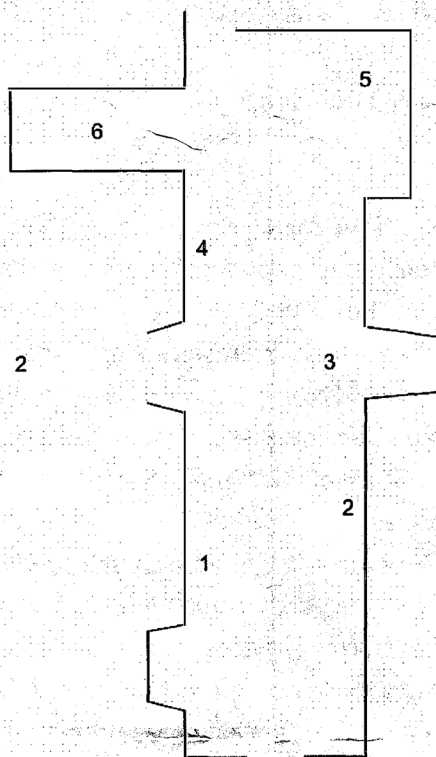

20-27 Nov. 2025

This exhibition, resulting from the Media and Material Literacy in Extended Reality conference call, is divided into four sections.

Section 1 (FBAUL Gallery), Section 2 (FBAUL Cistern), and Section 4 (National Museum of Contemporary Art - MNAC) present works by contemporary artists, as well as installations developed during the workshops submitted for the conference. Section 3 (Lagoa Henriques Auditorium Corridor) focuses on artworks created by FBAUL students within the framework of the institution's higher education programmes.

Across all sections, the exhibition engages with themes related to expanded reality, offering reflections on our relationship with a medium both capable of expanding and radically transforming our perception of the real. These artistic approaches unfold along a continuum, from full immersion in digital environments to modes of interplay in which the boundaries between material and digital become increasingly porous. Yet, even as these limits dissolve, materiality remains a fundamental layer, shaping the conditions through which both digital and hybrid realities take form.

The artworks presented here resonate with the conference's thematic scope, which examines how expanded environments are transforming teaching and learning practices, complementing traditional modes of instruction and reshaping educational practices, methodologies, and assessments. In doing so, these artworks operate as tangible outputs of practices that dialogue with and interrogate expanded environments, revealing how they reconstruct modes of seeing, sensing, and meaning-making.
